

Cozy in Carthage...

Liberty High School sweethearts Michelle and Joey Harris bought their first home in Carthage and are writing the next chapter of their lives together. As new parents, they are amazed by how fast their son Joseph is developing. The little guy is five months and finding out how much fun his hands can be.

In her work life, Michelle teaches special education at Unity Middle School in Mendon. She finds it gratifying to see her students' progress. Now that she is back on the job, Michelle is happy to have her son's day care near her work place.

After working in Macomb, Joey recently started a new position as a crop specialist at Prairieland FS, Inc. in Taylor, Missouri. He values interacting with his customers and taking on the challenges of the farming industry.

When the couple decided to buy a home in Carthage, they were impressed when they met with Kim Neal at First Bankers Trust Company. As first-time homebuyers, Michelle remembers, "Kim was very down to earth, and we felt comfortable asking her questions. We felt like she was really trying to protect us. Anytime we contacted her – even now – she gets right back to us." The couple was so happy with their mortgage experience that they moved everything to First Bankers Trust. Joey is pleased to say, "It's nice to get that small-town feel when you go into the bank. It's always an enjoyable experience."

Michelle also likes paying her mortgage online and has the bank's mobile app. She says, "It's just convenient especially with the little guy! If I can get an errand done sitting at home, that's worth it to me!"

Let the family at First Bankers Trust take care of yours. Stop in today to see how we can help you achieve your financial goals.
